Dear Mathew:

As one of the teachers who was involved as a "helper" in the presentation that you gave on Tuesday at Golden High School, I want you to know how pleased I was with the day's activities. It is a compliment all in itself that you had as many normally squirming young ladies quiet and attentive, and I was so impressed with the information that you shared with them. I, too, am a firm believer in helping these ladies learn to trust their "gut feelings" to help save their lives.

I work with the Sexual Assault Counseling Program at Lutheran Hospital in Wheat Ridge, and I know how often I wish the survivors I work with had trusted their feelings. You did a wonderful job of helping our Golden High School students get a better sense of just what that trust involves and also how to put that trust into actions through practical application. Your information was very useful for them - and for me. I now have a handful of 3x5 cards in my glove compartment, and I have put a trip to the car accessory store on my list to get a couple of those slick tire repair "things" about which you were talking.

Thanks for sharing your knowledge with our students (and those of us who are more seasoned). I look forward to all that you can now share with our young men, and I am hopeful that I will be able to listen in on the roundtable discussion that will be the final step in this teaching process.

Sincerely,

Nancy A. Hardesty
